"John Fordun a priest of the diocese of St Andrews, chaplain of the church of Aberdeen lived in the time of the kings Robert the second & the third, being contemporary with cardinal Walter Wardlaw, bishop of Glasgow who died A.D. 1386. He compiled the History of the Scots in five books from the beginning till the death of David I A.D. 1153, & left some collections towards a continuation, all which were published in 1722 with great fidelity & exactness, by the learned Mr Hearne. — This chronicle of Fordun was continued down by Walter Bower abbot of Inchcolm (Aemonia insula) & other writers of the 15th age, till the death of James I. in 1437, & the whole work, composed of St Fordun's five books & of the continuation of the history by different hands till the aforesaid year 1437, is commonly known by the title of Scotichronicon." — Innes' Essay I. 201

"Fordun spared neither labour nor diligence to restore the history of his country, & for that end travelled over all Scotland, searching everywhere the libraries, churches, monasteries, colleges, universities & towns, gathering together whatever remains he could meet with, & his progress discoursing also with learned men versed in history, nay, not content with that, he travelled also, says my author, into England & Ireland upon the same search, setting [illegible] the informations he received as materials for what he intended. "This chronicle was in so great esteem in those days that all our Monasteries & other churches, which had been deprived of their ancient history in King Edward I.'s time as well as the rest of the kingdom did so universally adopt Fordun's chronicle, as the standard of our history, that it bore in after-ages the general name of Scotichronicon: & each monastery making only a few inconsiderable additions to it, & continuing it down, gave it a name: Hence it was called Liber Paslatensis, Sconensis, de Cupro &c. after the names of the several monasteries which adopted transcribed & continued it."

HISTORIAM SCOTORUM

INTRODUCTIO BREVIS.

CAP. I.

De Scotiæ longitudine ac latitudine, nominibusque quibus veteribus cognita fuit.

SCOTIÆ regnum Albionis insulæ, sive Magnæ Britanniæ, partem septentrionalem, insulasque adjacentes, complectitur: ipsa intra Britanniam incipit, ad insulæ latus occidentale, a freto Solvæo, ad orientale ab amne Tweda, quibus ab Anglia dirimitur: distantque partes ejus australes a circulo æquinoctiali, Boream versus, gradibus 55. ad minimum, si exile promontorium unum aut alterum, in Gallovidiæ extremo ad Africum limite, excipias, quorum neutrum tamen ad 54 gr. 50 min. excurrit; terminatur verò, Septentrionem versus cum ipsa insula, ad grad. 58. min. 35. vel, ut alii volunt, 58° 40' Ab oriente in occidentem latissimè patet, ubi poli altitudo supra grad. 57. paululum assurgit, per milliaria Italica, quorum sexaginta gradum æquinoctialem conficiunt, non ultra CLXIII. Romana vetera CCVIII. Anglica CXC. At in tabulis geographicis vulgatis plerisque, ultra quod factum oportebat, tam in longitudine quam in latitudine, extenditur.

Ex hisce patet Scotiam limites eosdem fere obtinere quos Severus, quondam Romanorum imperator, indomitis in Britannia gentibus, muro lapideo a mari ad mare per insulam ducto, reliquerat; quum murus ejus ad dictum fretum finem habeat. Inter orientalem quidem muri terminum atque Twedæ ostium, per milliaria haud pauca terra interjacet, quam partim prætenturis, ultra murum suum positis, tenuisse Romanos, partim, utpote inter hostes, per eorum tempora desertam mansisse, probabile est.

Regio hæc diversis temporibus sub diversis nominibus veteribus innotuit, ea namque, sicut et ipsa Saturnia tellus, aliæque variæ, sæpius nomen posuit. Incolæ vetustissimi, sub Scotorum appellatione jam per quindecim annorum centurias exteris cogniti, ab Albione, antiquiore totius insulæ nomine * patriam suam Alban aut Albin, seque Albinich nuncupant, Scotorum aut Scotiæ nomen, lingua sibi propria nequaquam agnoscentes. At Græcis Latinisque scriptoribus antiquitus sub decantato Iernes eorum, aut Hiberniæ, nomine celebrabatur; illi siquidem, rebus minus adhuc exploratis, hanc, aut saltem partem ejus longe maximam, ſuper Forthæ Glottæque æſtuaria jacentem, pro inſula habebant, exiſtimantes procul dubio bina hæc fretum conſtituiſſe unicum, ab orientali ad occidentale mare pertingens; quamvis, ut loquitur Tacitus, poſt veritatem ab Agricola ſocero ſuo plane compertam, "diverſi maris æſtu per immenſum re-"vecta, anguſto terrarum ſpatio dirimantur," ac proinde peninſulam tantum efforment, ſed talem, ut nihilominus inventum ibi in Britannia terminum ſcripſerit ipſe Tacitus, in vita Agricolæ cap. xxiii.

Romanis arma ſua per Britanniam citeriorem ad vicinitatem ejus propagantibus, cognitum tandem eſt non eſſe inſulam Hiberniam catenus dictam terram, ſed peninſulam: circa idem tempus deſpecta eſt, ut videtur, ab occidentali Britanniæ latere inſula prius incognita, quam hodie Irlandiam dicimus. Unde non multo poſt Hiberniæ nomen terræ iſtæ noviter inventæ, quæ revera inſula erat, aſſignare ſcriptores cœperunt, veterum autem Hiberniæ, quam inſulam non eſſe deprehenſum jam erat, Calidoniæ nomen inditum; quo vocabulo deſignari cœpit omne ſpatium prius Hibernia dictum, a Forthæ æſtuario ad extremitatem inſulæ Britannicæ, ut ex Cor. Tacito de vita Agricolæ, et Solini Polyhiſtore * liquidò conſtat; et exinde incolæ univerſi Caledonii vocabantur: Caledones quoque eoſdem dictos ſcribunt quidam, ſed nulla idonea auctoritate ſubnixi.

Dehinc poſt centum quinquaginta aut amplius annos, Romani pleniorem de incolis notitiam adepti, duo diverſa populorum genera Caledoniam inhabitare deprehenderunt, alterum Britannorum, ut videtur, quibus quia antiquum Britannorum corpora ſua pingendi morem, jamdudum apud provinciales deſuetum, retinebant, Pictorum tribuerunt nomen; alterum ab his moribus diverſum, quos, quam ob cauſam non liquet, Scottos deinceps vocitabant. Nec tamen proinde novum regioni nomen indidere Romani, ſed permanſit Caledoniæ nomen, ad ultima eorum tempora; licet hoc non adeo univerſe obtinuerat, quin nonnulli Britanniam adhuc tanquam in duas inſulas diviſam conſiderarent, quarum alterius tanquam barbaræ, alterius verò, Romanis ſubditæ, ſub Romanæ inſulæ denominatione meminerint. Hos, ut dominos ſervi, imitabantur etiam Romanis ſubditi Britones, quos partem Britanniæ ſuam, ſive potius dominorum ſuorum, Romanam inſulam, aut ſimpliciter Romaniam, reliquam vero Barbariam, ſtolida vanitate indigitaſſe, ex Gildæ hiſtoria perſpicuum eſt. Alii ut Ptolemæus, cum ſuam Aſtronomiam ſcriberet, eandem ut inſulam, Britanniam parvam dictam, deſcribit; licet cum ad geographiam ſcribendam ſe applicaret, a ſe diſſenſerit, ut poſtea dicetur.

Scottorum nominis mentionem tertio a Chriſto nato ſeculo factam reperimus, et quarto frequentiſſimè, Scotiæ tamen, tanquam regionis nomen, ante ſeculi ſexti finem vix hodie apud probatos auctores occurrit. Exinde vero, regio hæc in parte ita vocari cœpit, et per ſecula jam decem exacta, Scotia in commune totius regni nomen apud exteros tranſiit; licet incolæ, non ſua tantum lingua, ſed et Latine scribentes, diu etiam post subactos Pictos, Albaniæ nomen potius elegisse videantur, quum patriam suam eo nomine sæpius postea designarint. Atque hæc de nominibus quibus Scotia antiquitùs cognita fuit annotâsse satis esset, si non cum litigiosis quibusdam Angliæ et Irlandiæ scriptoribus, de Hibernia præcipue antiquorum, ratio ineunda foret.

CAP. II.

Iernen Græcorum, et Hiberniam Romanorum veterum, fuisse Scotiam, sive Britanniam Transforthanam, probatur.

SCOTIAM quandoque dictam esse Hiberniam dudum observaverat, ut nostrates taceam, Ranulphus Higdenus Anglus, quod ut ostenderet in Polychronico suo, lib. 1. cap. Scotia, varia profert exempla. At Irlandi Anglique fere reliqui, ubicunque non solum Hiberniæ sed et Scotiæ, apud auctores occurrit mentio, ab antiquissimis temporibus ad undecimum usque seculum, omnia quo jure quâve injuria ad Irlandos trahunt. Agmen ducit Usserius Armachanus A. qui in antiquitatibus suis, quas vocat, Britannicarum ecclesiarum, cap. xvi. arroganter scribit, "ante seculum undecimum " post Christi nativitatem arbitrari se neminem produci posse qui " Scotiæ appellatione Albaniam unquam designaverit." De Scotia postea: hic loci ostendere conabimur, Irlandiam per plura retro jam secula Hiberniam vulgo, licet non semper, dictam, veteribus vix, ac ne vix quidem, ante Vespasiani tempora, aut re aut nomine notam; sed Hiberniam illis, supra quam vocabant Britanniam insulam, hoc est ultra Forthæ æstuarium ad septentrionem jacuisse.

Hujus rei testem satis idoneum Strabonem Geographum nobilissimum, ante alios appellamus, apud quem eò spectantia bene multa reperiuntur, et primò quidem lib. iv. pag. 201. hæc habet:

I. "Hibernia versus septentrionem juxta Britanniam porrecta, lati" or quam longior." Deinde subdit incolas humanis vesci carnibus, parentum mortuorum corpora comedere et id genus alia; non maledicendi studio, ut alii quidam, sed portentosa, qualia de longe dissitis fama semper referri solent, enumerans. Quare et apologiam suam ipse facit, monens, "Se hæc ita referre ut testibus fide dignis " destitutum. Carnibus humanis vesci Scythicum esse dici, idem" que etiam, obsidionum necessitatibus urgentibus, Gallos, Hispanos, " aliosque plures fecisse, fama ferri."

II. Idem lib. ii. pag. 72. "Extrema autem navigatio a Gallia " versus septentrionem nostra ætate dicitur esse in Hiberniam, quæ, " ultra Britanniam sita, ægre ob frigus incolitur; ita ut quæ ulterius " sunt habitari non posse existimentur. At Hiberniam non amplius " quinque stadiorum millibus a Gallia abesse perhibent."

III. Lib. ii. p. 114. "Ego autem, inquit, septentrionalem orbis " habitabilis finem multo propius meridiem versus existimo, (quam " Pytheas videlicet, qui circa Thulen, ubi tropicus æstivus Arctici

" circuli

" circuli vicem gerit, ultima esse scripserat); qui enim hodie ter-
" ras perlustrant, ultra Hiberniam nihil possunt referre, quæ ad sep-
" tentrionem prope Britanniam sita est, (ἡ πρὸς ἄρκτον πρόκειται τῆς
" Βρεττανικῆς πλησίον) ferorum plane hominum domicilium, ac
" propter frigus ægre incolentium. Ibi ergo finem constituendum
" censeo."

IV. Ibid. p. 118. " Orbis terrarum habitabilis latitudinem maxi-
" mam describit linea per Nilum ducta, incipiens a Cinnamomiferæ
" regionis parallelo, et Ægyptiorum exsulum insula, desinens in pa-
" rallelum Hiberniæ."

V. Ibid. " Latitudinem ejus docuimus definiri extremis parallelis
" lineis, habitata ejus à non habitatis dirimentibus: eæ vero sunt,
" versus septentrionem per Hiberniam, et ad Zonam torridam per
" Cinnamomiferam, transeuntes."

VI. Ibid. p. 132. " Terra habitata suis definitur terminis; au-
" strino quidem parallelo, qui per Cinnamomiferam; septentrionali,
" qui per Hiberniam, ducitur."

Unde luce meridiana clarius constat, Hiberniam Straboni esse terræ habitabilis terminum ultimum, insulam supra, sive ultra Britanniam, ad septentrionem, sitam, non autem ad occidentem, ubi jacet Irlandia: cumque hoc secundum reliquorum veterum, quos per opus suum laudat, geographorum placita scribere, dubitandi locus non est; si enim ex iis celebrior ullus contraria tradidisset, existimari vix potest quin id notaturus fuisset, qui Hiberniam pro fine terræ habitatæ præcise stabiliverit; immo qui acriter insurgit in eos qui ulteriores esse habitationes scripserant. Notat Casaubonus ad lib. i. p. 63. Strabonem putasse Iberniam Britanniæ esse πρὸς ἄρκτους in quo (inquit) fugit eum ratio, quum sit ei potius ad occasum. Sed ille quid Strabo in his vellet non satis perspexerat, ut statim patebit.

At lapsum de Hiberniæ situ tantum Geographum, inquies; insulam vero magnam, a Britannia diversam, in ejus vicinia sitam, certe ab eo designari, quæ nulla est, nisi de Irlandia intelligatur: neque enim Britanniæ regio Transforthana insula est, sed partem ipsius Britanniæ constituit. Quod si concederetur Hiberniam ibi de Irlandia non accipiendam, dicendum esset de insula ista penitus siluisse scriptorem præstantissimum, quod parum verisimile est.

Et quidem Regionem illam non reipse insulam esse, sed peninsulam, libenter agnoscimus. At hoc non agnoverunt Strabo veteresque alii, quorum mens ex ipsorum scriptis indaganda est, non autem scriptorum sensus ad placita et opiniones nostras, sive veras sive erroneas, detorquendus; quod tamen iis qui hodie de rebus præsertim Britannicis scriptitant, solenne ferè factum est, dum majorum nostrorum dicta et gesta, ad ævi hujus dogmata quædam nova, moresque illaudatos effingere, non imperite magis, quam absurde, fatagunt.

Veteres autem Britanniam nostram tanquam insulas binas considerâsse, Britanniam viz. et Hiberniam, quarum illa ad Forthæ æstuarium tuarium tantum porrigi eis visa est, hæc super idem incipere, ex supra dictis, sed et præcipue ex longitudine, quam Britanniæ à meridie ad septentrionem assignabant, manifesto docemur. Scribit namque Strabo "se docuisse Bactrios ad Caucasum sitos, juxta Daimachum, stadiorum tribus millibus trecentis propiores esse septentrioni quam Hiberniam: quibus, inquit, si addantur quotquot sunt a Massilia ad Hiberniam, conficientur stadiorum millia duodecim et quingenta." Unde patet secundum Strabonem stadiorum octo millibus cum septingentis Massilia distare Hiberniam. At sæpius dixerat numero rotundo Britanniam Massiliâ distare stadiorum millibus quinque.

Quum ergo veterum Hibernia ad septentrionem supra Britanniam sita sit, ut prius monstravimus, sequitur Britanniam a meridie ad septentrionem per stadia MMMDCC. sive milliaria Romana CDLXII. et dimidium, ad Strabonis rationes, protendi; quod verissimum est de Britannia citra Fortham: ipsius namque promontorium meridiei proximum a circulo æquinoctiali remotum esse per gradus 49. 55. observavit Edmundus Halleius; et Forthæ æstuarium, supra Edinburgum, ab æquinoctiali gradibus 56 distare, sive polum in ipso illo freto ad gradum 56 assurgere, novimus: Gradum vero meridiani in Britannia pedes Anglicos 367196, sive milliaria Ang. 69. 54469. comprehendere experimento facto comperit Norvodus: et milliaria Anglica quinquaginta duo exæquare fere milliaria Romana quinquaginta septem statuit idem Halleius *, quod ad veritatem proxime accedere puto: unde Britanniæ, ad Forthæ æstuarium usque, longitudo est milliarium Romanorum CDLXIII cum dimidio. Ulterius ergo non pertingere Britanniam, et exinde initium capere Hiberniam veterum, perspicuum est.

Irlandiam insulam fuisse illi nesciebant, sed partem Britanniæ constituisse autumabant, ut pariter constat ex longitudine quam Britanniæ suæ ab ortu ad occasum tribuebant. "Insula namque Britannia, ut scribit Strabo, lib. ii. p. 128. juxta Galliam æqualibus spatiis, tota totam coæquans, porrigitur, longitudine stadiorum circiter quinque millium." Et libro quarto p. 199. longitudinem hanc præcise magis ad stadia quater mille trecenta vel quadringenta definit. Medius inter hosce numerus est 4350. quot stadia conficiunt milliaria Romana ferè DXLIV. et tam Britanniæ quam Hiberniæ latitudinem complectuntur. Quod ita colligitur: latissime ab ortu in occasum porriguntur hæ insulæ, ubi poli altitudo est graduum 52. min. 30. per gradus circuli paralleli ibi describendi undecim et minuta circiter 48. ut in præstantioribus quas præ manibus habemus Gul. de L'Isle tabulis geographicis delineantur. Ponamus ergo, quum certiora desint, gradum circuli æquinoctialis habere pedes Anglicos 365658. quam mensuram meridiani gradum per totam Galliam obtinere, repetitis constat experimentis; et gradus undecim et minuta quadraginta octo paralleli per grad. 52. min. 30. ducti, ad sphæræ rationes, milliaria Romana DXLV. dimetientur.

tur. Ex quibus mirandam plane Strabonis ἀκρίβειαν obſervabis.

Hæc aut ſimilia ex aliis apud Strabonem locis oſtendi poſſent, ni ſuperfluum id putaremus. Unico tamen loco diverſa tradere videtur, dum ſcribit lib. i. p. 63. " Jam a Maſſilia in mediam Britanniam non amplius eſt quinque ſtadiorum millibus. Atqui e Britannia media non amplius quatuor ſtadiorum progreſſus millia terram inveniet ægre habitabilem, nempe circa Hiberniam, ut ulteriora iſta, in quæ ille Thulen rejicit, non jam habitari poſſint." At pro μέσην τὴν Βρεττανικήν, quod mediam Britanniam interpretantur, ibi legendum eſt εἰς νῆσον τὴν Βρεττανικήν, quia tam in eadem pagina, quam alibi, ſtadia totidem ipſi Celticæ adſcribit: ac etiam quod aliter latitudinem longe nimiam, immo duplam et ultra, quam alibi, Britanniæ adſcriberet, nempe ſtadiorum octo millia.

Credere licet nautas Bolerium, quod dicitur, Britanniæ promontorium prætervectos, quum Irlandiam diſpicerent, eandem continuari inſulam, re minus perſcrutata, exiſtimâſſe. Quicquid ſit, ex hiſce certum eſt Britanniæ partem auſtralem et Irlandiam pro inſula unica et partem ejuſdem borealem pro ſeparata altera, quam Hiberniam dixerunt, veteres accepiſſe.

Neque Strabo ſolus hic erravit, eadem namque tradit Pomponius Mela: " Supra Britanniam, inquit, Juverna eſt, pene par ſpatio, ſed utrinque æquali tractu littorum oblonga." Geographis nempe ſolenne eſt dicere ea eſſe ſupra, quæ ad ſeptentrionem jacent, ut notum eſt. Irlandiam etiam ſub Britanniæ nomine ab eo comprehendi haud dubitandum, præſertim quod hanc Siciliæ maxime ſimilem eſſe ſcribat, quum aliter minima huic cum illa ſimilitudo interveniat. Qui ſcholia in Strabonem dederunt haud leviter torquentur, quod Hiberniam latiorem quam longiorem dicant et ille et Mela: " quod verum eſt, inquit Xylander, ſi ab Auſtro ad Boream ſupputetur latitudo." Caſaubonus aliam conjecturam proponit. Sed de Hibernia Strabonis et Melæ falluntur. His de Britannia ultra Fortham ſermo eſt; illi de Irlandia dicta accipiunt.

Claudius Ptolemæus, dum Syntaxin ſuam magnam ſcriberet, eaſdem opiniones fovebat, licet cum ad Geographiam ſcribendam ſe accingeret, ſententiam permutaverit, poſtquam jam Antoninus murum ſuum ædificâſſet. Certe ille inſulam, ſatis magnam, a Cataractonio in Britannia per gradum unicum, ſive milliaria Anglica LXX. ſeptentrionem verſus diſtantem, ſub Britanniæ parvæ nomine laudat: quæ alia eſſe non poteſt, quam Scotia ultra Fortham; licet Irlandi hanc etiam appellationem ad inſulam ſuam, repugnante ratione, trahere nitantur †. Ptolemæus namque in magnæ Syntaxeos lib. ii. cap. 6. poſt parallelos quinque per Magnam Britanniam enumeratos, hæc habet:

" Vigeſimus quartus parallelus eſt ſub quo maximus dies 17. 45 horarum æquinoctialium eſt. Iſte ab æquinoctiali 57 gradibus diſtat, et ſcribitur per Cataractonium Britanniæ.

" Vigeſimus quintus parallelus eſt ubi maximus dies 18 æquinoc-

† Uſſer. cap. xvi. p. 378.

" tialium

" tialium horarum eſt. Iſte ab æquinoctiali 58 gradibus diſtat, et
" ſcribitur per parvæ Britanniæ auſtralia.

" Vigeſimus ſextus parallelus eſt ubi maximus dies horarum eſt
" æquinoctialium 18. min. 3. Iſte ab æquinoctiali 59. 30 gradibus
" diſtat, et ſcribitur per mediam Britanniam parvam.

" Ubi ergo dies maximus 19 horarum æquinoctialium eſt, ille
" parallelus 61 ab æquinoctiali gradibus diſtat, et ſcribitur per bore-
" alia Britanniæ parvæ."

Ita per tres tantum gradus Britanniam hanc parvam a meridie Boream verſus extendit, quæ omnia ad regionem ultra Fortham ſatis congruunt, nequaquam cum Irlandia; tum quod hæc per plures gradus porrigatur, quum quod ponat auſtralia parvæ ſuæ Britanniæ per gradum meridiani integrum ſuper Cataractonium; qui parallelus per mediam iſtam Hiberniam novam, quam in geographia ſua nobis poſtea exhibuit ipſe Ptolemæus, tranſibit; et revera per gradum integrum ſupra oram ejus extremam deſcriptum oportuit.

Atque adeo mentibus hominum inſediſſe videtur opinio Hiberniam inſulam eſſe ultra Britanniam ad ſeptentrionem, ut, poſt veritatem compertam, rationes illis turbaret. Cujus rei in Ptolemæo exemplum habemus, qui, dum in geographia ſua novam Hiberniam deſcriberet, ne à reliquis omnino diſſentiret ſi eam propius ad auſtrum, quam ſeptentrionales Britanniæ partes, poneret, has ab occidente ad orientem, ſitu vero inverſo, projecit; quum reapſe à meridie ad ſeptentrionem porrigantur. Et id ſolum in cauſa fuiſſe cur hæc fecerit, ut Hibernia ſciz. ſemper eſſet ad ſeptentrionem, ubi antiquiores eam deſcripſerant, veroſimillimum videtur. Novimus Colini Maclaurin conjecturam, Romanos nempe Scotiam ab occidentali latere intrantes, ad orientale permeâſſe: inde errorem natum. Hoc autem abſque navigiis fieri non potuit; et nec Romanos navigiis Scotiam intraſſe, nec adeo erráſſe crederem, ut occidentem pro meridie haberent; hominem potius hæc conjectantem in hiſtoricis pariter et geographicis hoſpitem ſuſpicari liceat: ponamus enim Romanos intraſſe ad Solvæi freti extremitatem, quo magis occidentalis introitus non datur, atque a ſiniſtra non brevius ad occidentale, quam a dextra ad orientale mare, reſtabat iter.

De morte regis Willelmi.

ANNO Domini millesimo ducentesimo decimo quarto, rex felicissimus Willelmus, [illegible] cum magno [illegible] Continet [illegible]

[illegible] in se sic habentis;

Continet

Continet hoc in se nemus castrum Strivilense:*
Hic armis Bruti, hic stant Scoti cruce tuti.

Ubi de die in diem viribus deficiens, et aliquamdiu languens, filio suo Alexandro ab episcopis, comitibus et baronibus in regem futurum commisso et recepto, rebus excessit humanis, plenus dierum et senectute bona; demandans suis familiaribus, executoribus et ballivis, de universis debitis et servitiis plenè singula singulis reddendis; cum perfecta devotione, interna compunctione, pura confessione, et aliorum sacramentorum catholica perceptione, regno optatâ pace stabilito, feliciter in Domino obdormivit, pridie Nonas Decembris, feriâ quintâ, circa tertiam noctis horam, anno Domini supradicto, regni quoque quadragesimo nono †, ætatis verò suæ septuagesimo quinto. De quo hujusmodi metra titulantur:

Flos regum, regnique decor, decus omne virorum,
Willelmus cælum rex pius ingreditur.
Annis in regno jam quinquaginta peractis,
In Strivelino mortuus ille fuit.
Pridie rex obiit Nonas, in pace, Decembris,
Qui Badocensi conditur almus humo.
Nunc agitur regnum facientis regia jura
Regis Alexandri, militis egregii.

Ut autem dilectus Deo et hominibus, cujus memoria in benedictione censebitur, patet in hoc, quòd quondam venerabiles patres Jocelinus episcopus Glasguensis, Arnoldus et Osbertus Melrosensis et Kalcoensis abbates, cum aliis viris honestis, in ambassiata pro negotiis regis et regni Romam profecti sunt; quibus prudenter peractis, sani et hilares ad sua redierunt. Lucius verò Papa, famam regis Willelmi audiens, zelum Dei, ut concepit, habentis, regnique sui leges magno cum labore observantis, per ambassatores regios ad curiam accedentes, sed et nunc per Apostolicos nuncios de curia revertentes, rosam auream pretiosam miro artificio insculptam, in sceptro etiam, sive virga aurea, erectam, orthodoxo sibi et catholicæ ecclesiæ filio regi Willelmo, cum paterna benedictione, transmisit.

In antiquo reperi scripto ‡, quòd rex Willelmus A. D. MCLXXXIII. dedit filiam suam, quam genuerat ex filia Roberti Avenel, Roberto de Brois, cum magno honore. Sed quis fuit iste Robertus, non plus reperi de eo. Et anno sequenti dedit aliam filiam suam, Adam nomine, Patricio comiti Laodensi. Et anno Domini MCXCI. mortuo dicto Roberto de Brois, dedit filiam suam Isabellam, quæ erat uxor ipsius Roberti Brois, Roberto de Ros in uxorem, apud Hadington. Et reperi scriptum, quòd quidam mirabilis magus, perstringens arte suâ diabolicâ oculos intuentium, semel in præsentia regis Willelmi jactita-

Porro auctor Chron. Mailr. eundem anno ætatis suæ LXXII. obiisse scribit. ‡ Antiquum illud scriptum fuisse videtur Chronicon Mailrossense, è quo hæc eadem dedit auctor supra, cap. 55. et 56.
